"An extremely bright and entertaining book."—Sunday Times.

STRENUOUS AMERICANS
By R. F. DIBBLE.
With 9 Illustrations. 8vo. 12/6 net.
An attempt to do for America of the last century what Mr. Lytton Strachey did for Victorian England. Biographies of Brigham Young, the Mormon; Admiral Dewey; Mark Hanna; James J. Hill; Frances Willard; Jesse James, the bandit; and P. T. Barnum.

Principles of Literary Criticism. By I. A. RICHARDS. 10/6 net. "An extraordinarily interesting beginning. He is erudite and he is intelligent; he makes the courageous attempt to be at the same time scientific and psychological."—Conrad Aiken, in Nation.

The Thread of Ariadne. By ADRIAN STOKES. Foreword by JOHN MIDDLETON MURRY. 6/- net. "This seems to me a remarkable book. I believe it is symptomatic of a movement of thought which will have many repercussions in the coming years."—From the Foreword.

The Novels of Fielding. By AURÉLIEN DIGEON. With a portrait. 10/6 net. A compact life of the novelist is followed by a detailed analysis of the great novels and a study of Fielding's influence on the development of the English novel.

London Life in the Eighteenth Century. By M. DOROTHY GEORGE. With 8 Illustrations. 21/- net. This book, which gives a vivid picture of the life and work of the poorer classes of the period, will prove to be one of the most important contributions to the history of London made of recent years.

Telepathy and Clairvoyance. By R. TISCHNER. Preface by E. J. DINGWALL. 10/6 net. A detailed description of a series of remarkable experiments. "Such investigations may expect to receive the grave attention of readers. They will find the material here collected of great value and interest. We think that the experiments will persuade any reader that the present state of the evidence necessitates at least an open mind.—Times Literary Supplement.

A Plea for Monogamy. By Dr. WILFRID LAY. 10/6 net. A frank and outspoken statement of the methods by which unhappy marriages may be avoided, showing how divorce and prostitution can be reduced to a minimum. A book for every married man or woman, and for all those intending to marry.

Sex and Civilization. By Dr. PAUL BOUSFIELD, M.R.C.S. 10/6 net. "Dr. Bousfield, who is one of our foremost specialists in the psycho-analysis of disease, makes in this book a courageous and outspoken examination of the causes of this inequality [of men and women]. Full knowledge and plain speaking will be found in this book."—Saturday Review.

Fighting the World: The Struggle for Peace. By Count MICHAEL KAROLYI. With 2 portraits, 21/- net. "The book is history rather than politics. As history it is of first-class importance. The interest, however, is not merely historical. There is personal drama in it and the revelation of character. There are vivid pictures of wartime Hungary, and most exciting accounts of German intrigue. A generous book, the writing is clear and vivid, and the translation singularly well done. A book that is a real pleasure to read."—Birmingham Post.

The Psychology of a Musical Prodigy. By G. REVESZ. 10/6 net. "For the first time we have a scientific report on the development of a musical genius, instead of being dependent on the vaguely marvellous reports of adoring relatives. That Erwin is a musical genius, no one who reads this book will doubt."—Times Literary Supplement.

THE MENTALITY OF APES.
By PROF. W. KÖHLER.
With 28 Illustrations. 8vo. 16/- net.
"The account of these experiments may be said to mark a turning-point in the history of psychology. It is of absorbing interest to the psychologist, and hardly less to the layman—especially the lover of animals. It will always be regarded as a classic in its kind and a model for future studies."—Times Literary Supplement.
